THE STRADIVARIS OF IT'S ALL

» Every instrument is a unique piece

A fascination with the traditional craft of violin-making has been in the Goldfuss family's blood for three generations. Their instruments are distinguished by top quality, optimum sound, and timeless beauty. Precision-crafted soundboards, backs, and masterfully carved scrolls make them highly unique pieces. Even copies of old masters modeled on those made by Antonio Stradivari and Joseph Guarneri del Gesù are made true-to-original here. For nearly 100 years, this establishment has dedicated itself to restoring and repairing valuable string instruments, enabling

DACHSHUND MUSEUM

UNIQUE
IN THE WORLD

34

The world's first and only dachshund museum in Regensburg delights visitors from all over the world. A charmingly staged exhibition with the world's largest collection of over 30,000 dachshund objects. A must for anyone who can't resist the iconic dachshund look! No dog is as well-known around the world as the dachshund. The museum is located right in the heart of the Old Town. The collection was compiled by two Passau master florists Seppi Küblbeck and Oliver Storz over a period of more than 25 years and is now displayed publicly. Many of the exhibits are lovingly arranged in display cases, often whimsically and with a real feel for the dachshund, which represents Bavaria like no other.

GOLF MUSEUM

Golf MUSEUM

48

The museum displays seven centuries of golf history in its space not far from Regensburg Cathedral. Over 1,200 rarities have been collected over the last 50 years by golf historian Peter Insam. They are displayed in the medieval vaults of a listed patrician house. Compare, for example, the oldest golf club in the world from 1450 with today's clubs. What does the world's oldest golf ball from 1525 look like? An El Dorado for golf fans! Embark on an exciting journey through the history of golf from the Middle Ages to the present day.

CENTER OF EUROPEAN DIPLOMACY
IN THE EARLY MODERN PERIOD

50

In 1245, Hohenstaufen Emperor Frederick II declared Regensburg a free imperial city. The town hall was erected as a place of civic self-governance. The heart of the Free Imperial City of Regensburg beat here for centuries. Emperors and monarchs, electors, princes, and envoys came and went in the Imperial Hall, originally a banqueting and dance hall. There were celebrations, but it was also a place for deliberation and consultation, where far-reaching political decisions were made. From 1663 to 1806, this was the meeting place of the Perpetual Diet, which can be seen as a kind of forerunner of today's international institutions such as the European Parliament or the UN General Assembly. It brought together those with rank and status in Europe.

The town hall tower is 55 meters high and can be seen from afar.

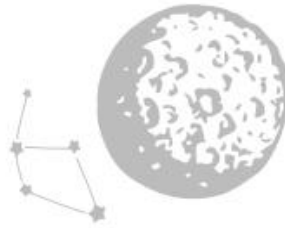

"Das Geld zum Fenster hinauswerfen" (throwing money out the window): This custom was practiced in Regensburg by emperors and kings when they presented themselves to the people from the banquet hall.

KEPLER'S COSMOS IN NEW SPLENDOR

KEPLER

» The famous astronomer Johannes Kepler (1571-1630), a contemporary of Galileo Galilei and, like him, one of the founders of modern science, came to Regensburg in November 1630 to negotiate with Emperor Ferdinand II about his outstanding salary for the previous years. He moved into the house of Hildebrand Billi, a Regensburg merchant. Shortly after his arrival, however, Johannes Kepler fell seriously ill and died in Billi's house in Regensburg on November 15, 1630. The house where he died has been preserved to this day. Since its conversion into a museum, it has been faithfully reconstructed with historical interiors from the 17th century. The construction history of the former patrician house can be traced back to the 13th century. The interior furnishings, some of which are original, give you a feeling for the lifestyle of the 17th century.

A MUSEUM NOT JUST FOR FANATICS

» This high-percentage panoply provides a glimpse into the paradise of the beloved fine drop and allows you to experience its diversity.

The life's work of spirits enthusiast Pit Krause includes a huge world-renowned collection of the finest whiskies from all over the world, historical pieces spanning several centuries, equipment for the production process, quirky and humorous exhibits, as well as a cozy tasting lounge with leather armchairs. Every visitor will find something of interest here, as there are wonderful stories surrounding almost every exhibit.

DOCUMENT NEUPFARRPLATZ

The entrance to the document Neupfarrplatz is located on the northern long side of the Neupfarrkirche.

» Neupfarrplatz reflects Regensburg's 2000-year history perhaps better than any other part of the city. In ancient times, this plot was used for Roman officers' residences. In the Middle Ages, Regensburg's Jewish quarter was located here. There are said to have been close to 40 buildings, including several public buildings, such as the synagogue. The Jewish community had its own administration and its own judges. After the expulsion of the Jews in 1519, the buildings were demolished above ground; the foundations and cellars were preserved. A new square was created with a new church at the

» It was one of the most spectacular museum openings of the last decade in Germany: The Museum of Bavarian History in Regensburg is located right on the Danube, and is one of the most state-of-the-art museum buildings in Europe. Visitors are welcomed in the foyer with a multimedia panorama show entitled "What happened before". Cabaret artist and actor Christoph Süß plays 40 different roles as he cinematically explores 2000 years of Bavarian history – from Roman times to the start of the Kingdom of Bavaria in 1806 – with lots of tongue-in-cheek humor. That alone makes the visit worthwhile. But it's just the beginning. An escalator takes you up from the foyer to the permanent exhibition.

The Donauwaller (Danube sheatfish) in front of the building and the lion in the foyer welcome visitors to the museum.
