House of BAVARIAN HISTORY

» It was one of the most spectacular museum openings of the last decade in Germany: The Museum of Bavarian History in Regensburg is located right on the Danube, and is one of the most state-of-the-art museum buildings in Europe. Visitors are welcomed in the foyer with a multimedia panorama show entitled "What happened before". Cabaret artist and actor Christoph Süß plays 40 different roles as he cinematically explores 2000 years of Bavarian history – from Roman times to the start of the Kingdom of Bavaria in 1806 – with lots of tongue-in-cheek humor. That alone makes the visit worthwhile. But it's just the beginning. An escalator takes you up from the foyer to the permanent exhibition.

The Donauwaller (Danube sheatfish) in front of the building and the lion in the foyer welcome visitors to the museum.

HOUSE OF BAVARIAN HISTORY

» It's a feast of historical theater and amazing productions on 30 stages with some 1000 exhibits and numerous multimedia installations spread over an area of approx. 27,000 sq. ft. On the first floor, the impressive museum also boasts a separate exhibition space spanning nearly 11,000 sq. ft. With a museum shop and its own Bavarian pub, it is convincing all along the line.

Paul McCartney from the Beatles and Elvis Presley bought their instruments in Bavaria.

LEERER BEUTEL

THE LARGE PANORAMIC EXHIBITION OF EAST BAVARIAN ARTISTS

» The imposing building, with its mighty wooden beams, was erected circa 1600 as the city granary. Today, the “Leerer Beutel” (empty purse) is a listed building, completely renovated in 1980 and now used as a municipal gallery building, among other things. It has become a magnet for Regensburg’s cultural life. The “Städtische Galerie im Leeren Beutel” boasts a broad range of art spanning multiple levels.

The collection primarily reflects the work of East Bavarian artists, which is expressed in the paintings and graphic works of Art after 1945 is represented by the paintings and sculptures of the “SPUR” group and their milieu. These include Lothar Fischer, Heimrad Prem, Helmut Sturm, Hans-Peter Zimmer, and the internationally renowned glass artist Erwin Eisch.

Regional and international art is exhibited in temporary exhibitions, ranging from paintings and sculptures to installations and photography. Highlights in recent years include exhibitions showcasing the work of Pablo Picasso and Andreas Feininger, and photography by Linda McCartney.

» The Museum of History is located in the former Minorite monastery of St. Salvator. The various eras in the history of the city and the region are presented in this building complex. Visitors can discover the highlights of Regensburg history, from the Stone Age to the 16th century, presented in three fascinating sections. A large number of archaeological treasures are exhibited in the “Prehistoric Upper Palatinate” section. The “Roman Regensburg” section is the museum’s best-known exhibition area. Regensburg was the site of the Roman fort Castra Regina. Here you are provided with a comprehensive insight into the period from the first to the fifth centuries CE. The fort was the precursor of today's Regensburg and an important military base at the border of the Roman Empire. For example, you can see an impressive replica of a Roman house with a heated living room and kitchen.

Another section presents exhibits from the Middle Ages. The former Minorite monastery provides the perfect space for this. The well-preserved church with its adjoining cloister provides an authentic experience of the medieval splendor of Regensburg in rooms preserved in their original form. These date back to the 16th century, the time of the most famous artist from Regensburg: Albrecht Altdorfer.

ROMAN HISTORY IN REGENSBURG

Take the stairs in the parking garage at Dachauplatz and be transported back to Roman times in Regensburg.

» Large sections of the original wall around the Roman legion camp have been preserved in three places in Regensburg's old town: in the south-east corner at Ernst-Reuter-Platz, in the north-east corner at St.-Georgen-Platz, and in the parking garage at Dachauplatz. The information center for the three sites of the document Legion Camp Wall (Legionslagermauer) is also located there. The legion camp wall surrounded the nucleus of the medieval city that contained the residence of the Bavarian dukes and Carolingian kings.

DOCUMENT LEGIONSLAGERMAUER

- » While the Roman ashlar wall in the west lost its significance with the first expansion of the city around 920, it remained part of the city wall in the east for another 400 years and in the south and south-east until the 19th century. Large sections of the Roman fortress wall have been preserved in Regensburg to an extent that is unique in Germany, and are impressively staged. Together they form the “document Legion Camp Wall”, which can be visited free of charge and is freely accessible.

ONE OF THE LARGEST ARCHAEOLOGICAL EXCAVATIONS IN GERMANY

A place to experience almost 2000 years of cultural history: One of the largest archaeological excavation sites in Germany is located under the Romanesque Niedermünster church right next to the cathedral. With its original features, an innovative lighting concept, and virtual 3D reconstructions, the unique document Niedermünster offers a glimpse into the distant past – from the church of the noble 10th century chapter of nuns, with five Bavarian ducal tombs, to the first palatine chapel from the 7th century, down to the foundations of the Roman legion camp Castra Regina from the year 179, on which the World Heritage city of Regensburg stands on.

The Niedermünster church is located at the north-east corner of the former Roman legion camp and not far from the cathedral.

DOCUMENT NIEDERMÜNSTER

» History impressively comes to life on 600 square meters. Stone testaments trace the presence of the Romans and reveal interesting stories about the lives and work of medieval dukes and duchesses and saints. Here, visitors encounter historically significant figures such as Saint Erhard, a highly revered foreigner from the Frankish Empire, Duke Henry I and his wife Judith, who ruled Bavaria in the mid-10th century at the time of its greatest expansion to the gates of Venice, and Gisela of Burgundy, mother of two famous children: Queen Gisela of Hungary and Emperor Henry II. Access is only possible as part of a guided tour.

DANUBE MARITIME MUSEUM

Danube Maritime MUSEUM

NORTH BAVARIAN
INDUSTRIAL ROUTE

The museum is located on board two historic Danube ships, the paddle steamer Ruthof/Érsekcsanád (built in 1922/23) and the motor train ship Freudenau (built in 1943). Here you can immerse yourself in the history of shipping on the Danube. The ship's holds, which have been left in their original state, give you a vivid sense of the hard daily grind of the boatmen. The steam and diesel engines take up a lot of space. The Freudenau is in running condition and available for public and charter trips. Dioramas, models, and display boards tell the story of how shipping once operated on the Danube. The museum is part of the North Bavarian Industrial Route. The Ruthof/Érsekcsanád and Freudenau are moored on the southern (right) bank of the river between the Iron Bridge and the Old Stone Bridge on Marc-Aurel-Ufer beside Thundorferstrasse.

Dachshund MUSEUM

UNIQUE IN THE WORLD

The world's first and only dachshund museum in Regensburg delights visitors from all over the world. A charmingly staged exhibition with the world's largest collection of over 30,000 dachshund objects. A must for anyone who can't resist the iconic dachshund look! No dog is as well-known around the world as the dachshund. The museum is located right in the heart of the Old Town. The collection was compiled by two Passau master florists Seppi Küblbeck and Oliver Storz over a period of more than 25 years and is now displayed publicly. Many of the exhibits are lovingly arranged in display cases, often whimsically and with a real feel for the dachshund, which represents Bavaria like no other.

PRECIOUS CRUCIFIXES, MONSTRANCES, CHALICES, AND A UNIQUE ENAMEL TREASURY BOX ...

Right next to the cathedral, in the historic rooms of the former episcopal residence with its Renaissance frescoes, you can discover the treasure of the cathedral. Regensburg was considered a prominent center of goldsmithing right up to the 18th century. Extraordinary exhibits in the cathedral treasury show why the most respected medieval guild was so highly regarded and why faith and craftsmanship were inextricably linked.

In addition to the high-quality goldsmith's work, robes bearing the finest embroidery are also on display. Particularly worth seeing: the famous enamel treasury box, which was probably created in one of the workshops of the French royal courts around 1400. It's decorated with 11,000 melted gold

St. Ulrich MUSEUM

1000 YEARS
OF CHRISTIAN ART

» An extraordinary museum space with a rich history: the church of St. Ulrich was first documented in 1238. The building is one of the oldest Gothic structures in Germany. Precursors can be found in the cathedrals of Paris and Laon. The magnificent rose window on the western side and the imaginatively decorated chapters and keystones bear witness to the high quality of the church construction. Frescoes from the period in which it was built have been preserved on the eastern side. The rich paintings in St. Ulrich with leafy vines and flowers, figures of apostles, and biblical scenes dates back to 1571. Art spanning almost 800 years comes together here. In 2023, internationally renowned painter and sculptor Markus Lüpertz designed eight expressionistic stained glass windows for the

The entrance to the document Neupfarrplatz is located on the northern long side of the Neupfarrkirche.

» Neupfarrplatz reflects Regensburg's 2000-year history perhaps better than any other part of the city. In ancient times, this plot was used for Roman officers' residences. In the Middle Ages, Regensburg's Jewish quarter was located here. There are said to have been close to 40 buildings, including several public buildings, such as the synagogue. The Jewish community had its own administration and its own judges. After the expulsion of the Jews in 1519, the buildings were demolished above ground; the foundations and cellars were preserved. A new square was created with a new church at the » center, the Neupfarrkirche. However, the building remained an incomplete church building, as it was abandoned in 1528 due to a lack of funds. When the city council converted to Protestant Lutheranism in 1542, the incomplete church was the first of the city's Protestant churches to be used. During excavations in the 1990s, large sections of the medieval cellars in the Jewish quarter were uncovered, and a gold treasury from the 14th century with 624 gold coins and a ring with the seal of the Jewish community were found, among other things. Today, visitors can head down into the "document Neupfarrplatz" and take a tour through three of these Jewish cellars, the ruins of 2000-year-old Roman legion camp walls, and the remains of a Nazi tunnel bunker.

DOCUMENT REICHSTAG

document REICHSTAG

CENTER OF EUROPEAN DIPLOMACY
IN THE EARLY MODERN PERIOD

In 1245, Hohenstaufen Emperor Frederick II declared Regensburg a free imperial city. The town hall was erected as a place of civic self-governance. The heart of the Free Imperial City of Regensburg beat here for centuries. Emperors and monarchs, electors, princes, and envoys came and went in the Imperial Hall, originally a banqueting and dance hall. There were celebrations, but it was also a place for deliberation and consultation, where far-reaching political decisions were made. From 1663 to 1806, this was the meeting place of the Perpetual Diet, which can be seen as a kind of forerunner of today's international institutions such as the European Parliament or the UN General Assembly. It brought together those with rank and status in Europe.

The town hall tower is 55 meters high and can be seen from afar.

“Das Geld zum Fenster hinauswerfen” (throwing money out the window): This custom was practiced in Regensburg by emperors and kings when they presented themselves to the people from the banquet hall.

DOCUMENT REICHSTAG

» The town hall was also home to the municipal court system. Prison cells and the “Fragstatt” – torture chamber – are housed in the basement of the building, along with some of the original torture instruments. The atmosphere has been vividly preserved. The document Reichstag is one of the most impressive buildings in Regensburg. On guided tours, you can immerse yourself a bygone era and understand why phrases such as “auf die lange Bank schieben” (shift to the long bench) or “am grünen Tisch entscheiden” (deciding at the green table) have their origins here in Regensburg. A permanent exhibition provides background information on the structure and function of the Reichstag.

KEPLER

» The famous astronomer Johannes Kepler (1571-1630), a contemporary of Galileo Galilei and, like him, one of the founders of modern science, came to Regensburg in November 1630 to negotiate with Emperor Ferdinand II about his outstanding salary for the previous years. He moved into the house of Hildebrand Billi, a Regensburg merchant. Shortly after his arrival, however, Johannes Kepler fell seriously ill and died in Billi's house in Regensburg on November 15, 1630. The house where he died has been preserved to this day. Since its conversion into a museum, it has been faithfully reconstructed with historical interiors from the 17th century. The construction history of the former patrician house can be traced back to the 13th century. The interior furnishings, some of which are original, give you a feeling for the lifestyle of the 17th century.

DOCUMENT KEPLER

» Original documents from Kepler's life are on display in the museum's historic interiors. Books, letters, documents, historical instruments, and models of Kepler's laws of planetary motion provide an insight into his life and work. The astronomer's findings laid a decisive foundation stone for modern astronomy and continue to shape our understanding of the universe to this day. Together with the special historical rooms, the "document Kepler" provides an extraordinary insight into the time of the great scholar. The building has been comprehensively refurbished and will be presented from spring 2024 with a newly designed exhibition and barrier-free access on all floors.

DOCUMENT SNUFF FACTORY

SNUFF FACTORY

A FASCINATING PIECE OF REGENSBURG'S INDUSTRIAL CULTURE

» The former company building of the Bernard snuff factory (Schnupftabakfabrik) is one of the largest complexes of Regensburg bourgeois house architecture from the Middle Ages. Its changing use from an upscale residential and representational building for wealthy merchants to a snuff factory also reflects the history of Regensburg. In three rooms of the former snuff factory, a fascinating example of authentic Regensburg industrial culture can be viewed preserved in its original state.

In the “alchemist’s kitchen” you can find out how the fine snuff tobacco popular blends “Pariser”, “Saarbrücker”, “Schmalzler”, and “Aecht Bayerischer Brasil-Tabak” came about. The “Schmalzlerfranzl” was so popular that the factory became the largest snuff factory in Germany before the Second World War.

MUSEUM Dreieinig- keitskirche

» When the Imperial City of Regensburg declared its Protestant faith in 1542, the city became an outpost for the spread of Lutheran doctrine. After the Catholic Dominican order had prohibited the joint use of its church of St. Blasius, the Protestant town council decided in February 1627 to build the Church of the Holy Trinity. The pews, which are still in use today, were installed around 1630 in the single-nave church built by Johann Carl from Nuremberg. The seating arrangements reflect those that were customary in urban society at the time.

A small museum has been set up in the central gallery. The paraments and religious textiles on display date back to the time of those who built the church. Many of these paraments are still used in church services today. Sacred objects of everyday use can be admired here

» as well as documents on the history of the building and testimonies from the life of the Protestants in Regensburg. The Bach Organ Info Point provides information on the origin of the organ, which was inaugurated in 2020 in the historic case from 1758. Next to the church is the envoys' cemetery. Many of the magnificent Baroque tombs were erected for deceased Protestant envoys of the Perpetual Diet (1663-1806). The Baroque epitaphs are still a reminder of the splendor of those times.

- » Tip: You can climb the tower of the Church of the Holy Trinity, from where you can enjoy a wonderful panoramic view over the roofs of Regensburg's Old Town. The ascent is a little arduous, but you shouldn't miss out on this view.

THURN UND TAXIS ST. EMMERAM PALACE

The Taxis family established the postal service in Germany in 1490, and for over 350 years Taxis postilions and letter carriers traveled the roads through Central and Western Europe. In 1748, Prince Alexander Ferdinand of Thurn and Taxis was appointed Imperial Principal Commissioner, i.e. its representative at the Perpetual Diet. The Princely House relocated from Frankfurt am Main to Regensburg.

St. Emmeram Palace dates back to the Benedictine monastery of the same name, founded in the 8th century. In 1812, the buildings became the new residence of the Princely House of Thurn and Taxis as partial compensation for the postal service. Between 1812 and 1910 it was transformed into today's Palace. In the old abbey wing are the Romanesque-Gothic cloister with neo-Gothic crypt chapel, the Baroque refectory, and the princely court library with a hall frescoed by Cosmas Damian Asam. The New Convent dating from the 16th and 17th centuries has been home to the representational STATELY ROOMS of the princely family since the early 19th century. St. Emmeram Palace, surrounded by an eight-hectare park, is one of the largest inhabited palaces in Germany.

Ballroom, Silver Hall and other stately rooms can be visited as part of a guided tour.

Albert II lives in St. Emmeram as the 12th Prince of Thurn and Taxis.

» The Romanesque-Gothic CLOISTER of the former imperial monastery of St. Emmeram is one of the most impressive in Germany. The oldest parts date from the 12th century, the most recent from the 14th century. In the Romanesque chapter house and through the unique Benedictine portal from the first half of the 13th century, you will be transported by the medieval and enduring solemnity of this unique monument. Prince Maximilian Karl had the private VAULTED CHAPEL built in the cloister garden in 1843. It is considered the earliest and most significant princely mausoleum of German historicism. To this day, deceased members of the princely family are buried here.

The Thurn and Taxis Palace Festival takes place in the inner courtyard of St. Emmeram Palace every year in July, and the Christmas Market in Advent.

ST. EMMERAM PALACE

ROYAL STABLES & TREASURY

» The MARSTALL (royal stable) was one of the most important representational areas of a palace.

In the years 1829–1832, master builder Jean-Baptiste Métivier erected the stables of the princely palace. These comprise the stable wings for the horses and the 600-square-meter indoor riding arena with figurative decor by sculptor Ludwig von Schwanthaler. The Marstall Museum enjoys high standing in Europe and has an extensive collection of carriages, sleighs, sedan chairs, and litters from the 18th and 19th centuries. Gala harnesses and riding accessories also illustrate the elaborate horse husbandry of Thurn and Taxis.

In the TREASURY – a subsidiary of the Bavarian National Museum – in the north wing of the Marstall, outstanding works of art acquired by the princely house over the centuries are presented alongside curiosities and private objects of the princely family and its history. Valuable furnishings, fine porcelain, prized snuff boxes, exclusive weapons, and exquisite gold and silver items from Europe's leading artisanal workshops immerse you in the splendor of one of the most important dynasties of European aristocracy.

NATURAL HISTORY MUSEUM

Natural History MUSEUM

» The Natural History Museum is housed in the elegant Herzogspalais in the Herzogspark. The exhibitions at the Natural History Museum explore the geological foundations, the geological past, and the wildlife of the region of East Bavaria. Regensburg lies at the intersection of four different landscapes. The museum explores the geological formation and present situation of the region of East Bavaria.

On the first floor, the nature and landscapes of East Bavaria are presented in the form of rocks, minerals and soils, and the development of life based on a variety of fossils. On the two upper floors, today's East Bavarian habitats are presented with forest and rock, water, and Jurassic dry grassland. One area of focus is the diversity of insects in the region.

Of special interest is the live bee colony that can be observed in spring and summer. Dioramas, interactive media, a microscope table, and children's books and games make children's eyes light up. A unique feature is the history room, which serves as a natural history cabinet with a wood library from 1790. The theme is continued in the adjacent Herzogspark with a pond and bee garden as a small "open-air laboratory", and a geological nature trail. Changing exhibitions on environmental education projects, nature, and art are regularly displayed here.

Tip: Be sure to visit the adjacent Herzogspark. The Renaissance garden is situated in the former city moat from the 13th century.

KUNSTFORUM OSTDEUTSCHE GALERIE

» It presents the highlights of the museum's extensive collection. Many well-known artists are represented, including Lovis Corinth, Käthe Kollwitz, Oskar Kokoschka, Bernard Schultze, and Katharina Sieverding. Changing exhibitions are dedicated to thematic focal points and prominent personalities in art history. These draw attention to contemporary art in East Central Europe and explore current issues.

The museum is housed in an ensemble of buildings in the Stadtpark on the western side of Regensburg's Old Town. The striking red installation at the museum entrance characterizes the look and feel of the Kunstforum Ostdeutsche Galerie. In 2006, its Czech creator Magdalena Jetelová incorporated it into the original Art Nouveau building, which was significantly expanded in the late 1960s, before its opening in 1970. Further sculptures from the museum's collection can be found on the museum forecourt and in the Stadtpark.

KARTHAUS Museums

The Karthaus museums comprise two museums. The Karthaus Museum is dedicated to the Benedictine and Carthusian monks who lived here. The replica of a cubicle and the recreated garden create a vivid impression of the living space of a Carthusian monk.

St. Vitus is one of the oldest hall structures in Bavaria and boasts a famous Annunciation fresco from the 12th century. The Psychiatry Museum shows the development from the former Carthusian monastery to today's district clinic with an overview of the treatment options. Another exhibition in the "Rasura" explores the 150-year history of the Regensburg District Hospital, including the development of psychiatry.

Regensburg, making it a whisky mecca once and for all. This pioneering project in the world of fine spirits presents rare one-offs, the first single malts, cask finishes, organic whiskies, historic bottles, and famous bottlings from hundreds of distilleries, some of which have closed forever. A motherload of malt, that reflects the range of the world's most aromatic beverage and its influence and bar culture.

Everything is represented here, from Scottish single malt, Irish pure pot still, American bourbon, and Canadian rye, to German grain whisky, Swedish wheat whisky, and Japanese blend – from the peat tamper and pope's letter to Charles and Diana's wedding whisky and the rocking Elvis bottle, Winston Churchill's recipe for alcohol during Prohibition, the Metallica-sound-infused whiskey, Rommel's war booty bottle, and a whisky condom. Edutainment at its best – a must-see!

Regensburg

The diverse and exciting museum landscape in Regensburg will take you on exciting journeys through time and immerse you in the lifestyles and atmospheres of bygone eras. Experience exciting contemporary history first hand, peer over the shoulders of great scholars, and have the occasional chuckle. You'll learn the origins of German idioms such as "auf die lange Bank schieben" (shift to the long bench) and "am grünen Tisch entscheiden" (deciding at the green table).

The museums in Regensburg offer an incredibly broad thematic spectrum.
